

Keeping Kids Safe Around Liquid Detergent Packets

Liquid detergent packets are concentrated and designed to dissolve in water.

More than 33,000 calls were made to poison centers for detergent packet incidents since 2012.

More than 700 children age 5 and under experienced serious effects after getting into detergent packets in 2012 and 2013.

That's an average of one child per day.

That's one call every hour.

Children at greatest risk are 1 and 2 year olds.

Children have required hospitalization due to:

- difficulty breathing
- excessive vomiting
- severe eye burns and irritation
- temporary vision loss
- loss of consciousness

36% of incidents happen when product is outside of the container.
